

Patient Access API Member Education and Resources

The Rule gives you the right to see your own health data on a 3rd party health App you use on your mobile phone or computer. We will call this “your App.” This will allow you to make better decisions about your medical treatment. CareFirst BlueCross BlueShield Community Health Plan District of Columbia (“CareFirst CHPDC”) gives your App access to your health data through a Patient Access API (Application Programming Interface).

What is an API?

A simple way for two pieces of software to communicate with one another to get data. An example is when you send a message using a cell phone. Here, an API allows CareFirst CHPDC to communicate with your App.

What is health data?

Health data is information about your medical history. Your doctors give us that information. It includes your name, your address, and your birthday. It also can include information about medical tests you have had, any medical conditions you might have had, and your insurance information. The health data that is available through your App includes data that CareFirst CHPDC has collected about you, going back to January 1, 2016, or since you joined our plan.

How is my data available?

Your data is available on a Patient Access API. The API will allow CareFirst CHPDC to share your health data. It can be shared with your App. CareFirst CHPDC has no control over how your App will use or share your health data.

What to think about before sharing your health data?

Before you agree to share your health data, you need to think about some things. Will your App sell your data? Will your App use your data for research or advertising? How will this app use your data?

Will your App let you control how it can use your data? If you stop using your App, will your data be removed? If you no longer want to use your App, can you take away the App’s access to your data?

Is sharing information online safe?

When making decisions about your health, you should only share your health data with people you trust, like your family or doctor. Never share your username or password. Store your paper records in a safe place. Only use software you trust and always use a password on your phone, tablet, and computer. Do not send any data by email unless you can protect it with a password.

Does your App fall under HIPAA?

HIPAA is the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act. This is a federal law that says your health information cannot be shared by CareFirst CHPDC unless it is for health care treatment, payment or operations and other reasons allowed by the federal law.

Apps are not covered by HIPAA. Your App will have access to all your health data once you allow it. You should read the App's privacy policy to see how they the 3rd party health App may use your data. Make sure that you are comfortable with their rules. An App that publishes a privacy notice must do what it says in that notice. Apps may not be subject to other State and local privacy laws.

What are your rights under HIPAA?

If you want to learn more about your rights under HIPAA, visit this website: <https://www.hhs.gov/hipaa/for-individuals/index.html>.

Apps are subject to other Privacy laws. For example, the FTC protects you against any App that breaks privacy rules. If an App breaks a privacy rule, the App will get in trouble.
